Industrial Outlook In Western Canada

The West is closing the year a brighter outlook than at one time seemed likely. Since the summer months there has been an improvement in business conditions and a more confident attitude on the part of traders, resulting, in some cases, in a conservative expansion of lines that appealed to buyers throughout the country. The situation is better, notwithstanding fluctuations that are apparently uncontrollable. The indications are that improvement will be continued.

It has not been a favorable year for industrial expansion in the way of new factories, but there has been some building up of existing plants and the manufacture of new lines of merchandise. While construction shows some improvement toward the end of the year, it has not figured largely in the return to better conditions. Mining of all kinds has been one of the most noticeable improvements, together with an increasing demand by overseas markets for Canadian lumber. The domestic lumber market necessarily remains quiet, in view of the limited amount of contruction work Grain crops are not all disposed of in one year, so that to what extent the yield is profitable is not known. Marketing, in some respects is difficult, in relation to many products, but distinct gains have been made during the year in improving methods and reducing costs, giving a more profitable outlook.

New Developments

Activity has been shown in the opening up of various Western resources, as well as investigations that may lead to new developments at a later date. New granite quarries in Manitoba territory have been put into operation. Epsom salts are being produced in British Columbia territory. The growing of broom corn in the Kamloops territory of British Columbia, after a testing period of some two or three years, is giving satisfactory results. Drilling for gas and oil in the three Prairie Provinces is extending the area of production and the season has brought important results. Salt wells in Manitoba and Saskatchewan have been further developed. The production of sodium sulphate continues from the Saskatchewan lakes with the probability of an additional plant. Moulding sands of which there are several deposits in the west, are finding new markets. A feldspar deposit in eastern Manitoba is being brought into production. Gold mining properties are being opened up in Manitoba and western Ontario. New coal mines are being operated in both Alberta and Saskatchewan. Some further work has been carried out in relation to the value of the bituminous sands of the Athabasca country, and a good deal of activity shown in developing the mineral deposits of the Great Bear Lake country in the Northwest territorities. Mining in British Columbia is on a good level, with new properties being opened up and many of the mines at one time abandoned being again put into operating condition. There has been some electric power development in this province, with prospects for further expansion next year. Enquiries have been numerous and many investigations of prospects have taken place during the year in relation to various resources that will eventually be brought into commercial use.

Looking back over the business and development which has taken place during the year, there are many reasons for believing that good work has been done and that improvement in conditions generally is earnest of the continuation of better trade in the coming year.

Welling Nsws

The Christmas Program was very much enjoyed on Dec. 22 when a concert was put on in the church by the School and Primary. The children performed their parts exceptionally well in the plays, dances, songs and readings that were given. Santa Claus distributed gifts and a treat much to the joy of the kiddies. The winner of the tree was Fred Pickette.

The ward Supper and Dance on Thursday Dec. 28 was a great success. The committees worked very hard. The hall was beautifully decorated in Xmas colors. Plates were laid for 90 guests. Before supper the crowd was led in a few games which aroused their appetites. Then the people descended to the hall below where the tables were in readiness. They found their places by means of place cards. A very appetizing supper was served which consisted of roast chicken, gravy, potatoes vegetables salad, pickles, cocoa and pie. Toasts were given and the crowd hardily responded. After supper, New Year Resolutions were read. The people next went upstairs where they enjoyed games for another hour. The rest of the evening was spent in dancing Tommy Allan and Mrs. Roscoe Gibb supplying the music. Everyone went home tired but happy.

On Friday a supper was given by the same committee to the children of the community. Games and dances were also enjoyed.

Meet the Members of the "Idlers"

THE IDLERS—Last years runners up for the Provincial Intermediate Basketball title are ready to begin what promises to be a tough fight for the cup this season. Beaten last year only by the Calgary Stadiums, and that by two points, in each of a double header on Calgary's big floor, are determined to bring the cup to Raymond this year.

The difficulty of playing on a large floor will be out this year as they are working on the new enlarged floor at the Opera House, and will be right at home on the largest floor in Alberta.

Although they got a rather late start, due to some of the boys working on the evening shift at the Factory, every one is out now, and working hard to be ready for the first game.

With most of last year's men out and a couple of new ones with the pep and ambitions of every man on the squad the very highest, watch out for the Idlers.

These are the boys we are depending on to fill the shoes of the Jacks when the time comes, and keep basketball at it's best in Raymond.

JUST A FEW THOUGHTS

We are starting another year. We are going to have a better year if we make it that way. What are your plans for 1931 as a citizen, as a taxpayer and as a member of the community? What is your attitude regarding the officials of our civic organizations. What is your outlook for the future and are you going ahead to make this the best year we ever had?

Raymond and district makes a unit, only to the extent that the people who comprise the unit support that diversity of interests that centre in the unit. During the coming year it would be a nice thing if every one would do all he or she could to BOOST, BOOST and BOOST for our town and district. This puts a load on everyone of us, and if we embark on such a campaign, we must make up our minds to work unceasingly toward that goal.

To the individual, it means that before neighboring towns and cities and mail order houses get big money, an effort will be made to give the local business place a chance for the business. To the business men it means that price, service, satisfaction and courtesy will be their watchword, and that instead of trying to force onto the people what you have, you will try and interpret the people's wants and fill them. It means confidence and understanding between purchaser and purveyor. Then too, the day is past when the buyer goes into a store and asks if they have this, that and the other. They like to go in and know theitems and the prices, and this implies advertising. Yes, we are tooting our own horn, and we believe rightly. When the biggest business firms in the world advertise unceasingly, in order to get business and maintain it, we believe that their example is worthy of pattern by the small business man. It is often stated that a firm that fails to advertise is sooner or laater advertised by the sheriff. We certainly hope that nothing like this happens to any of Raymond's business houses. So much for that. If we want prosperity, we will have to help make it, and a good starting point is a Buy at Home Campaign.

And what about our public bodies. We have our Town Council, School Board, Board of Trade, and a number of other public bodies. What kind of support do we give these organizations. They do not expect us to always see eye to eye with their policies. They do not think they are perfect and never make mistakes. But they do expect something better of us than the distasteful attitude we carry with us when we attend their meetings or ask questions regarding public affairs.

We regret that some citizens get so much apparent pleasure out of finding fault and running down our public officials. They get hell enough in the discharge of their duties, and the work they have to do, without citizens abusing them and their efforts without cause. This is a free country, if you don't like the men in office, get them out, but make the fight fair and in the open. We have elections coming soon, when we will have the opportunity of putting new men in a number of our public bodies if we want to get rid of the old ones. But folks, don't let petty likes and dislikes be the deciding facts in decisions on the matters. If a man is a good man on a public body, can't you bury your personal dislikes, or else outgrow them, and support a man because he is a good man for the job.

Just a word about the Board of Trade. This is supposed to be the mouthpiece of the community, and it endeavors to be. But in the accusations that it is run by only a few, we can say after steady attendance for more than four years, that only a few attend meetings of the Board, and of course the policies and decisions of the body are limited to the vision and knowledge of those who attend. There is no doubt but what decisions are made that may not be just right. But, if you want to have your say, come out to these and other public meetings and get the thing off your chest, and make this town the kind of a town YOU think it ought to be, instead of the town that the present faithful workers in its various civic bodies are making it. Think these things over.

WHAT DO YOU THINK

We received a book "Solving Life's Everyday Problems" for Christmas, and on page 44, paragraph two, is this:

"Scores of discouraged people could speedily alter their outlook on life and transform their own inner feeling if they would follow his example. Here, for instance, is a school teacher, bewildered and exhausted at the end of a terms work. What a difference it would make in her happiness if she would stop thinking of herself as an overworked woman trying to earn a small salary in a nerve-wracking job and begin to think of herself as a leader commissioned by the community to train the new generation for wiser and nobler citizenship!"

Tuesday Mrs. C. A. Bennett purchased a separator. The head office of the Company is in Winnipeg. The note read 6% interest before maturity and 8 after. Mrs. Bennett, before signing, ran a line through the interest and said if the Company didn't want it that way, they could keep their separator and return the down payment.

Mrs. Bennett has the right idea. Interest is cruel and should be done away with.

Recently we saw an automobile note that drew 12% interest after maturity. Think of it!

If there were more men in the country with Mrs. Bennett's idea of interest, this would be a better place in which to live.

Not long ago, a man living in a small town in Missouri moved away. He remarked that a town with only two streets was not big enough for him and his creditors.

As long as we keep signing interest bearing notes, no matter how many streets the town has, we will be face to face with our creditors.

Arthur Critchfield told us recenty that wherever he went, be it Town Hall, Office or place of business, men were busy figuring interest.

Interest levied against our homes and lands has been our undoing.—Magrath Store News

Lethbridge Experimental Station Weekly Letter

Lamb feeding at present promises to pay a good profit Final results are of course dependent on the market holding, but any lambs sold at present prices—around 5 cents net at Lethbridge at the time this letter is being written—should give somewhat more than $1.00 profit per head and pay market prices for feeds consumed. Moreover lamb feeding is quite a simple undertaking and a very small outlay for equipment is needed. This is the impression gained by your writer in visiting the lamb feeding lots at this Station and in talking to the men in charge to get some timely information on lamb feeding for this week's letter.

The lambs themselves indeed represent a high degree of skilful breeding but the equipment for fattening them is anything but elaborate and quite inexpensive. The lots used here, each built to hold 50 lambs very comfortably, are 20' x 75' in size and made of woven wire and cedar posts. Each lot is equipped with a watering trough and water heater, a couple of fifteen-foot feeding troughs, built to hold either hay or grain, a twelve-foot double faced self feeder where grain is fed in this way, a trough for beet pulp where it is fed and a salt box. The shelters provided are nothing more than low open sheds facing on one end of the lots, but these seem to give all the protection needed and more. At any rate when your writer saw the lambs in the lots on one of the stormiest days so far this winter, most of them were lying down outside and chewing their cuds contentedly enough it seemed in the storm while the sheds were all but deserted.

Several groups of lambs are on feeding trial here but our story needs to be brief and can be best told possibly if confined to some one lot. The lot of 50 lambs being fed wheat and barley by means of a self feeder has been selected. Lambs receiving beet pulp in addition to grain are showing more finish at the moment but the strictly grain ration is chosen because it is more widely used and the use of the self-feeder for sheep is something quite new that may be of interest to feeders.

The lambs, April born for the most part, were brought in from the forestry range late in September and after running on grain stuble for a couple of weeks the lambs, then averaging about 70 pounds, were put in the feed lots October 13th. Whole oats was fed at the start but this was entirely replaced in a few days with whole wheat and barley, equal parts of each. At the start grain was hand fed at the rate of ¼ pound per lamb per day, or 12½ pounds for the lot of 50 lambs. This was gradually increased from day to day until the amount had reached 110 pounds on the fourteenth day and part of the grain was left uneaten. Hand feeding was then stopped and the lambs were given free access to grain in the self-feeder. Bringing the lambs up to the point of full feed seems to be the critical period in using a grain self feeder for lambs, but once the lambs have been carefully brought up to this spoint of full feed the self feeder has been a safe and convenient method of feeding grain.

At this time lambs here on the self feder are eating about two pounds of grain daily and about one and one-quarter pounds of alfalfa hay. They would eat more hay readily enough but not without consuming less grain and thereby redueing their rate of grain. For this reason the hay is limited. Lighter lambs might use more hay to advantage but the lambs here are nearing the end of their finishing period and need therefore to consume a high proportion of grain to finish as highly as possible. The lambs are given free access to a mineral mixture consisting of equal parts iodized salt and ground bone meal. Straw bedding is thrown in the sheds once a week.

THE TELEPHONE MESSAGE

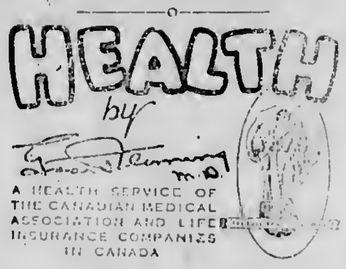
The Jones were half-way thru their morning meal when suddenly the telephone bell rang and Jones, the male, jumped hurriedly to his feet and rushed for the receiver.

Jones, the female, listened intently through the open doorway, hoping, perhaps that she might find fresh proof of her husband's inconsistency. But instead:

"Hallo . . Yes . . Yes . . what' . . Surely not! . . Aunt Agatha, you said? . . . Good heavens! When? . . This morning . . I am surprised . . What time? . . 7.30? . . Good gracious . . She's getting on too, isn't she . . Sixty-one? I thought so . . Well I never . . Only one I hope . . What! two? . . Great Scott! . . The nurse . . Has the doctor been? . . . Yes He said what? They're getting on as well as can be expected? . . Good . . Yes Yes . . All right. I'll ring you again later."

"Whatever . . . " began his wife as Jones put down the receiver again.

"Poor old Aunt Agatha," replied her husband, "she squeezed two of her fingers in the door getting up this morning".



NEARLY PERFECT

In these days, when so much fault is being found with the world in which we live, it is quite a relief to note that, in spite of social and economic unrest, there is one point upon which we can agree, something which can be described as "nearly perfect."

There is one food which comes close to perfection, and that is milk. As the child grows, his diet is elaborated until he eats the same as the rest of the family, but milk should be the backbone of his diet all through his years of growth, when he is building the body which must last him throughout life.

The child requires a mixed diet of milk, cereals and potatoes, eggs, a little meat and fish, fresh vegetables, salads and fruits. He needs milk because milk provides the calcium that is required to build strong bones and teeth. He needs milk because it furnishes vitamins which regulate the growth and development of the body. Added to this, milk is a source of practically all the food elements which are essential to the body.

The normal healthy child who has been properly trained likes to eat. There is something wrong with the child who does not enjoy his meals, or who has to be coaxed to eat. There are several causes for poor appetites. Eating between meals, particularly candy, means that the child will have no appetite for regular meals. The tired excited child is not interested in food. The child who has been shut in doors with no opportunity to play or to get his lungs filled with fresh air, does not eat well.

Many children have what appears to be a poor appetite, but this is, in reality, a bad habit or a wrong attitude toward food. The parents of such children are often over-anxious about their child. His failure to eat gets him a great deal of attention while his parents fuss over him and talk about him or even threaten him.

Every child should have at least one pint of milk a day. Milk can be served in many different ways as part of the meal. Variety in the preparation of foods prevents a monotonous diet. Milk can be used in various hot or cold drinks and in soups. There is an endless variety of custards. Milk goes into junkets, rice puddings and ice-cream. Meals which are based on milk are best, and they can be made most appetizing.
